

9. MAY 2018
9.30 AM - 4.30 PM

DRESDEN
EVANGELISCHE JUGEND-
BILDUNGSSTÄTTE
Heideflügel 2 | 01324 Dresden

BE YOND BOUN DARIES

1:30 Working Groups

After the inputs, there will be an opportunity to exchange experiences and needs in practical work more intensively in working groups. The thematic framework for this is provided by the draft of an international training curriculum. It combines the experience and expertise of seven European partner organisations in the fields of prevention, anti-racism, anti-discrimination and inclusion and on this basis makes recommendations about the content and conditions of training.

4.30 End

Since the event is aimed at an international audience, some points will take place in German. To ensure joint exchange of ideas translation will be provided.

Registration online under www.agjf-sachsen.de/fachtagungen.html

Fees: 25,00 €

*(Discounts for people in training are possible on request.
For international guests travel and accommodation costs can be reimbursed pro rata. Please contact us for the details.)*

AGJF SACHSEN E. V.
Neefestraße 82
09119 Chemnitz

Contact person: Romy Nowak
Tel.: 0371 - 533 64 22 | nowak@agjf-sachsen.de

The organizers reserve the right to exercise their house right and to deny entrance or exclude Persons belonging to the neo-Nazi or nationalist parties or organizations or to a corresponding scene or already in the past have come into being through racist, nationalist, anti-Semitic or other Inhuman remarks.

MUT MISSENDE UND TUNDE agjf PROJEKTE
Arbeitsgemeinschaft
Jugendfreizeitschüler
Sachsen e.V.

MAY 9th 2018 | DRESDEN
EVANGELISCHE JUGENDBILDUNGSSTÄTTE

European perspectives on youth work as democratic institution in preventing racism and discrimination

Internationale Perspektiven auf Jugendarbeit als demokratische Akteurin in der Prävention von Rassismus und Diskriminierung

9. MAY 2018
9.30 AM - 4.30 PM

DRESDEN
EVANGELISCHE JUGEND-
BILDUNGSSTÄTTE

Heideflügel 2 | 01324 Dresden

BE YOND BOUNDARIES

„BEYOND BOUNDARIES“ – European perspectives on youth work as a democratic institution in preventing racism and discrimination

It is not only in Germany, that it has become more acceptable to express right-wing populist and anti-democratic positions and attitudes. The way they have been normalised represents a European challenge confronting personnel and projects involved in youth work internationally. Against this background the question of professionalism in the field of democratic education in youth work is gaining general significance. It is posed on both a macrosocial and a pan-European level.

What specific qualifications do professionals in youth work require in order to confront right-wing populism, racism, sexism and homophobia? Which aspects are encompassed by their professional self-image and what role is played here by the structural conditions for youth work on the ground? And how can strategies and instruments that have proved successful in certain places be transferred successfully to other local contexts?

The aim of the event is to provide a forum where those with practical experience of confronting the phenomena described can exchange ideas. It makes sense to take a look at international perspectives of developing theories about right-wing populism, racism and the dynamics of radicalisation and to locate both where they overlap and where there are gaps. At the same time, efforts to raise the potential and professional expertise of youth work on the European level are to be noted. The intended result is joint quality development and the linking of international and local approaches to democratic education and prevention in youth work.

9.30 Arrival and welcome coffee

10.00 Start

INPUT 1: The radicalisation paradigm in the international debate

In Germany a broad landscape of prevention structures has been established, which is based conceptually to a large extent on approaches to research and practice related to right-wing extremism. On an international level, by contrast, research on radicalisation and “violent extremism” is primarily carried on a cross-phenomenal basis. Both the explanatory approaches and models found here are to a great extent influenced by preoccupation with Islamist terrorism. The presentation discusses where international debates can be usefully combined and where they should be distinguished from one another for the prevention of racism and other forms of hostility.

Dr. Nils Schuhmacher, political scientist and criminologist, lecturer at the University of Hamburg

INPUT 2: Together you are less alone: professional youth work and democratic education in Europe

Youth work is a protagonist in education for democracy, which plays a decisive role on a national level in the current confrontations with right-wing populism and nationalism. Nevertheless, it must constantly re-legitimise itself and defend it expertly against reservations regarding its effects. The presentation identifies possibilities of anchoring professionalism and strategic confrontation of racism and discrimination in youth work and thus consolidating the field of work as an institution of education for democracy. Here it is important to find a common basis that strengthens local and regional structures.

Marc Boes, Professional Open Youth Work in Europe

12.30 Lunch Break